

When you see a word with i, you can read where we explain it: on the paper called 'What do these words mean?'

Models of Participation

This paper shows different ways that people might tell the Government what they think BEFORE it decides about a mining proposal. These ways are called Models of Participation.

We want to hear what you think about these different models.

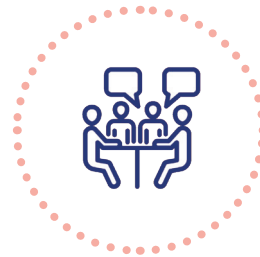

1 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Advisory Committee

A working group that gets ideas from Aboriginal peoples and Torres Strait Islander peoples and finds out what they want Government to know, before it decides about a mining proposal

- All members are Aboriginal peoples and Torres Strait Islander peoples
- Gives advice or help, or suggests changes about a mining proposal
- Can choose to give advice about culture (e.g. cultural heritage) or other things

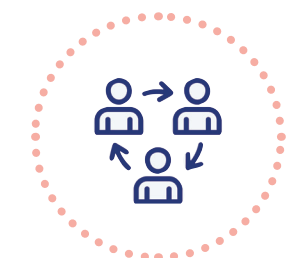

2 Community advisory committee or reference group

A working group that gets ideas from locals and tells Government about what might happen in their community if a mining proposal goes ahead

- The Government chooses interested members of the public
- It has 2 jobs
 - 1) find out what people in the community think and tell Government about this
 - 2) tell Government about good or bad things that might come from a mining project, and what to do about them
- Members understand the local community and environment

3 Community leader council

This group helps to point out problems and to work together to find ways of fixing problems that might come from a mining proposal

- Like a community advisory committee or reference group (Model Number 2) but the members are leaders from interested groups
- This group will be looking for good changes that locals or Aboriginal peoples and Torres Strait Islander peoples and their communities will get for the economy or people

Written submissions or comments

4

A paper that says what a person or organisation thinks about a mining proposal

- The Government might ask for this at different times
- Might be made public
- Might be given to Government or to the miner
- The Government might tell the miner it must give an answer to these written submissions or comments

Information session or open house

5

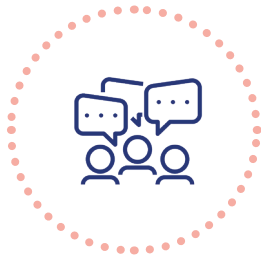

A public meeting when people can find out about the mining proposal and how the Government will decide about it

- Might be face-to-face or online, or both
- Might be more than one session
- Mostly the Government or the miner giving information to the public about a mining proposal
- The Government might organise the meeting, or the miner might do it

Public meeting

6

A meeting for locals to say what they think about a mining proposal – like what they are not sure about or worried about. And also to give ideas about what needs to change

- Mostly about people having the chance to talk, while the Government listens to their ideas about a mining proposal
- There are different ways a public meeting might happen. Sometimes there might be strict rules, for example about how many minutes people can talk for. Sometimes the Government might tell some people they must be at the meeting, and be ready to answer questions

You can let us know what you think:

Write or draw your ideas, or give us your ideas on an audio or video recording. You can send them to us by email or mail or upload them to our website.

We need to get your ideas by 13 September 2024
